The main expected direct results

To gain knowledge and educational techniques to train and educate publics and stakeholders on environmental transition of forest management in the context of climate change and the role played by MFs;

To operationalize the knowledge and apply the acquired techniques within their own educational activities, in the framework of strengthening effective sustainable forest management and Mediterranean Model Forest initiatives.

Long term expected impacts:

- citizenship, cooperation and active participation;
- the role of education in handling climate change and forest environmental transition;
- open mindedness by encouraging debates of ideas, exchange of various points of view among adults about forest sustainable development;
- implementation of the EU 2020 agenda and other national and international directives for sustainable development, in the context of linking sustainable forest management and climate change.
